A by-product of preparing your elevator talk (Module #1) is that you are also preparing what can be expanded into an interesting talk for civic and fraternal organizations once you are comfortable with what you have developed.

Add a bit more information, some no-fail audience participation demonstrations, and you can be out there being loud and proud in front of local groups talking about your profession as a certified consulting hypnotist.

Before you know it you could be so busy in your office you won't have time for the group talks, but you then always use the same material for radio or TV talk show guest appearances to reach even wider audiences.

Let's break it down . . .

1. You have developed a short, informative Elevator Talk, "polite and superficial chatting that might occur during a brief elevator ride," which in reality is a very precise bit of information that tells part of your story and either encourages listeners to want to learn more and asking for your business card, or at least leaves them better informed about the practice of hypnotism than they were before you talked with them.
2. You have several topics you can cover in your elevator talks and can rattle them off without hesitation because they have become a part of your professional being.
3. You don't have any problem, fear or apprehension about speaking before a group of strangers, especially when presenting the information you have learned so well in your elevator talks to one or two people at a time.

If the three points I've listed above apply to you, we can get going on preparing group presentations for service clubs (Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, Chambers of Commerce, etc.), social groups

(Women's Clubs, Single Parents, PTA, etc.), your local library, and any other group that would like to schedule an interesting talk about hypnotism by a professional in that field.

In my professional experience I have found that you need several things in your presentation:

1. An interesting topic.
2. A firm knowledge of that topic.
3. A strong opening to get their attention.
4. Unusual or fascinating information to keep their attention.
5. Audience participation or brief demonstrations.
6. The ability to satisfy the audience and at the same time leave them wanting more.
7. A strong finish.

You are probably wondering how you can get an invitation to speak before groups like this. That is the easy part, because there is usually a program chairperson who needs to get speakers for the meetings. You can also check with your local Chamber of Commerce to see if they have any list of civic and service organizations available. The list would give you the contact name, contact number or e-mail address of the officers, and usually the dates and locations of their regular meetings.

A phone call, e-mail, or note to the program chairperson, or the organization's secretary, will be your first contact. If you have a professional Information packet, and/or Website you should also make sure the your contact includes that information.

When you are aksed to give a talk make sure you send a confirmation a few days before the date, so the person who booked you will not be worrying. You can also send a brief introduction to be used that day. Confirm the location and time, and the length of the program. Noon meetings, such as Rotary International, are very tight on the time allowed, since most of the members have to be back in their offices or places of business on schedule. Evening groups usually have longer or more relaxed time schedules.
